QUORPORATE GAMES...

Fun team-based croquet – petanque – quoits – quornhole for groups

QUORNHOLE: really quite American...

Heyliger de Windt's 1883 patent for Parlor Quoits had most of the features of the popular game of Cornhole, but with a square hole instead of a round one. This followed earlier variants that sought to recreate quoit game play, but De Windt was the first to use bean bags and a slanted board. Later as 'Faba Baga' the game had two differently sized holes and one bag was larger than the others. Today a bag in the hole scores 3 points while one on the board scores 1 point. A 'dirt bag' on the board but touching the ground scores no points and should be removed straightaway before play continues.

We like games with qu in their name and Cornhole has a clear quoits heritage, so quite naturally we've renamed it Quornhole. With our professional approach, and good quality full-size boards with correctly weighted bags, our version makes for a great addition to a free-play format based either on our croquet and/or petanque. Quornhole can be played on grass and most outdoor surfaces. If indoors, the ceiling clearance required to the lowest obstruction is 12ft! Official game options are singles, doubles and 'crew' (4-a-side), and unofficially 3-a-side is obviously possible too.

We recommend our quornhole boards are used for self-play in combination with petanque and/or croquet run by our games coaches. We have two pairs of boards which we set up in the authentic format so players throw from one end to the other, and then back again. Each of the two lanes should be minimum 2.5m wide, with 1m spacing in between. Officially, the boards are set 27 ft (8m) apart, though this can be reduced to 20 ft (6m). With doubles one team member throws from one end, and the other team member throws from the other, with the other side doing the same. With 'crew' (4-a-side) two team members stand at one board, and two at the other.

something to engage the whole team and get them all on board!

QUORNHOLE up to 32 players at the same time!

QUORPORATE QUORNHOLE: what it's not...

A pair of basic half boards with a simple hole and some dodgy bags, and neither is it a badly-bodged DIY job made with the wrong materials and to the wrong dimensions.

And, it needn't include a tailgate party and quite a lot of American beer, though clearly it could...

QUORPORATE QUORNHOLE: what it is...

High quality full size cornhole boards - 4ft x 2ft - made to exact US specifications with the correct weight and size of bags.

We like the cancellation scoring but we're obviously quite flexible if the players don't quite stick to the official rules. Please don't tell the American Cornhole Association! (or for that matter the UK one either!)
